Ex Viceministro de Inmigración,
Refugiados y Ciudadanía de Canadá

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to the Metropolis Americas annual summit. Marking the 75th Anniversary of the UN Declaration on Human Rights, and focusing on migrants' rights, the conference is fittingly being held in New York City which has been, and continues to be, a gateway for migration to the Americas. The iconic New York Statue of Liberty remains a global symbol of freedom and of welcoming immigrants to new countries. With historic levels of refugees and displaced persons around the world how do we live up to the welcoming ideals of Lady Liberty and ensure that migrants rights are respected while managing migration in a safe and orderly fashion?

Over the next two days, we look forward to an active discussion and an exchange of views that reflects the diversity of perspectives on this topic throughout the Americas. It is an honour to be among such bright academics and seasoned practitioners as we find novel solutions to the complex migration challenges of the 21st century.

Es para mí un gran placer darles la bienvenida a la cumbre anual de Metropolis Américas. Con motivo del 75 aniversario de la Declaración de los Derechos Humanos de la ONU, y centrándose en los derechos de los migrantes, la conferencia se celebra en la ciudad de Nueva York, que ha sido, y sigue siendo, una puerta de entrada para la migración a las Américas. La emblemática Estatua de la Libertad de Nueva York sigue siendo un símbolo mundial de libertad y de acogida de inmigrantes a nuevos países. Con niveles históricos de refugiados y desplazados en todo el mundo, ¿cómo podemos estar a la altura de los ideales de acogida de la Dama de la Libertad y garantizar que se respeten los derechos de los inmigrantes, gestionando al mismo tiempo la migración de forma segura y ordenada?

Durante los próximos dos días, esperamos con interés un debate activo y un intercambio de puntos de vista que reflejen la diversidad de perspectivas sobre este tema en todo el continente americano. Es un honor estar entre académicos tan brillantes y profesionales tan experimentados mientras encontramos soluciones novedosas a los complejos retos migratorios del siglo XXI.

As a Central American I am most grateful for my appointment as Cochair of Metropolis Americas' annual summit together with Her Excellency Catrina Tapley. I have followed Canada's premier independent think tank's contributions in the field of migration and used to look enviously at it serving only North America. It is now a reality, Metropolis Americas has expanded beyond the borders of Canada, Mexico, and the US. It is an honor to have the opportunity to cement the collective way forward fomenting research and policy deliberations on migration that will benefit the Americas as a whole.

That vision for international participation from the Americas is commendable. By bringing together researchers, policy makers, service providers, and civil society, Metropolis is creating an environment that fosters collaboration and identifies solutions for safe, orderly, and regular migration, recognizing the new realities of migration in our hemisphere as recent years have seen the rise of larger scale irregular migratory flows because of continually limited regular migration channels and unaddressed drivers of migration.

I wish you all the best for a successful conference that encourages knowledge sharing and meaningful discussions and hope that it leads to outcomes that positively impact the lives of refugees, asylum seekers, and migrants' rights.

"Do your little bit of good where you are; it's those little bits of good put together that overwhelm the world."

Cómo Centroamericana estoy muy agradecida por mi nombramiento como Copresidenta de la cumbre anual de Metropolis Américas junto con Su Excelencia Catrina Tapley. He seguido las contribuciones del principal tanque de pensamiento independiente de Canadá en el campo de la migración y solía mirar con envidia que sólo sirviera a Norteamérica. Ahora es una realidad, Metrópolis Américas se ha expandido más allá de las fronteras de Canadá, México y Estados Unidos. Es un honor tener la oportunidad de cimentar el camino colectivo hacia el fomento de la investigación y las deliberaciones de políticas públicas sobre migración que beneficiarán a las Américas en su conjunto. Esa visión de la participación internacional de las Américas es encomiable.

Al reunir a investigadores, responsables políticos, proveedores de servicios y sociedad civil, Metrópolis está creando un entorno que fomenta la colaboración e identifica soluciones para una migración segura, ordenada y regular, reconociendo las nuevas realidades de la migración en nuestro hemisferio, ya que en los últimos años se ha producido un aumento de los flujos migratorios irregulares a gran escala debido a la continua limitación de los canales de migración regular y a la falta de respuesta a los factores que impulsan la migración.

Les deseo lo mejor para una conferencia exitosa que fomente el intercambio de conocimientos y debates significativos y espero que conduzca a resultados que tengan un impacto positivo en las vidas de los refugiados, los solicitantes de asilo y los derechos de los migrantes.

"Pon tu granito de arena donde estés; son esos granitos de arena juntos los que abruman al mundo".

"Everyone has the right to seek and to enjoy in other countries asylum from persecution" (article 14 of the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights) . December 10th, 2023 will mark 75 years since the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the anniversary provides an important opportunity to take stock of global migration challenges and provide a deeper examination about the state of migrant rights across the Americas. We've chosen the City of New York to hold this year's edition of the Metropolis America's annual summit which on December 11th will take place at the Global Conference Center of the State University of New York (SUNY) and on December 12th at Ellis Island's National Museum of Immigration.

I am proud to be associated with an outstanding program which will contribute to future research partnerships across the Americas. I want to thank our esteemed co-chairs Mayu Avila and Catrina Tapley. I also want to thank the organizations that are supporting this year's edition of Metropolis Americas and in particular World Education Services. Thanks as well to my colleagues Gallya Lahav and Rebecca Neuwirth.

My deepest appreciation goes to the Summit's organizing team at the Metropolis Institute led by James Ondrick, Emma Proux and Shania Bramble.

"Toda persona tiene derecho a buscar asilo, y a disfrutar de él, contra toda persecución" (artículo 14 de la Declaración Universal de Derechos Humanos de las Naciones Unidas). El 10 de diciembre de 2023 se cumplirán 75 años de la adopción de la Declaración Universal de los Derechos Humanos y el aniversario ofrece una importante oportunidad para hacer balance de los retos de la migración mundial y profundizar en el estado de los derechos de los migrantes en las Américas. Hemos elegido la ciudad de Nueva York para celebrar la edición de este año de la cumbre anual de Metropolis América, que tendrá lugar el 11 de diciembre en el Global Conference Center de la Universidad Estatal de Nueva York (SUNY) y el 12 de diciembre en el Museo Nacional de la Inmigración de Ellis Island.

Estoy orgulloso de asociarme a un programa excepcional que contribuirá a futuras colaboraciones en materia de investigación en todo el continente americano. Quiero dar las gracias a nuestras estimadas copresidentas Mayu Avila y Catrina Tapley. También quiero dar las gracias a las organizaciones que apoyan la edición de este año de Metropolis Américas y, en particular, a World Education Services. Gracias también a mis colegas Gallya Lahav y Rebecca Neuwirth.

Mi más profundo agradecimiento al equipo organizador de la Cumbre en el Instituto Metropolis, dirigido por James Ondrick, Emma Proux y Shania Bramble.

Migrant Rights at the Intersection of Gender and International Governance

In this opening plenary session, our focus will center on past, current and future challenges with regards to international migration and specifically migrants rights. Our distinguished speakers will share valuable insights, highlighting the intricate interplay between gender-related issues and migration—a critical facet in discourse and decision making around migration. This session offers a unique opportunity for participants to deepen their understanding of the complexities surrounding migrant rights, examples of good practices and fostering international cooperation.

Promoting Inclusive Public Spaces: Strategies for Immigrant and Refugee Integration in Canadian Cities

The Role of Municipal Public Space in ensuring Immigrants'/Migrants' Full, Equal, and Meaningful Participation in their new communities: Examples from the City of Saskatoon

Canadian cities are planners, custodians, and stewards of indoor and outdoor public spaces. From street naming to park development to community centres, this workshop highlights early efforts by the City of Saskatoon to intentionally plan and build diversity, inclusion and belonging into the public realm.

Intercultural cities and Anti rumor Strategies: an opportunity to mitigate xenophobia against migrant and refugees

The workshop seeks to answer how can societies deconstruct the old, but permanent rhetoric of racism and xenophobia, as well as strategies for inclusion to reach all vulnerable groups, especially those under the circumstances of human mobility. One glance at the hate pyramid shows that an anti-rumor strategies aim to focus on the most crucial factor: stereotypes and prejudices. To promote interculturalism as a policy and anti rumor strategies in countries like Mexico, an approach from the human rights perspective is needed, as well as an aspect of interaction between populations.

The Continuous Journey: Bridging the Gap between Humanitarian Response, Domestic Development and Refugee Re-Settlement

Globally, migration is not a linear phenomenon. Rather, migration is increasingly multidirectional. In recent years, many countries are observing an increase in population movements; some of these are characterized by people fleeing conditions of persecution in their countries of origin and seeking refuge in a destination country. Climate change is another driver, displacing populations due to natural disasters. According to the UNHRC, there is an exponential increase in displaced populations. On the other hand, the Central American region, has seen the rise of larger scale irregular migratory flows as a result of continually limited regular migration channels and unaddressed drivers of migration. The Northern countries of Central America have experienced this phenomenon, considering that every year El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras receive more than 100,000 returnees. Among these, families, women, unaccompanied children, and other migrants in vulnerable situation, require specific assistance to re-start their lives within communities.

Therefore, this panel discusses not only the existing gaps between the international humanitarian response and domestic resettlement and how we can bridge them to provide more integrated, coordinated, and seamless services to displaced populations. It also explores experiences and good practices implemented between international organizations and civil society. Establishing collaborative processes, exchanging tools and global approaches on protection, re-settlement, reintegration, mental health and psychosocial approaches, among other, and sharing experiences amongst these agencies can play a significant role in enhancing support for migrant returnees and refugees, and other displaced populations.

This workshop will be organized jointly by COSTI (<http://www.costi.org/>), and CIFAL York (<https://www.yorku.ca/cifal>) and IOM (<https://www.iom.int/>).

Addressing Challenges in Guestworker Programs: Collaborative Approaches and Legal Advocacy PART 1

Collective Solutions to Guestworker Issues

As irregular migration flows from Central America to the United States increase, the United States has focused on increasing participation in temporary foreign work programs as a partial remedy. The Biden Administration has increased the number of H-2B temporary work opportunities specifically for workers in Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador for several years now. While many of these work experiences can be positive, the H-2 visa programs are imperfect and often result in worker exploitation. To address this concern, U.S. and Central American governments have recently partnered with NGOs to work together in educating workers about their rights, supporting workers throughout their work experience, and connecting workers to legal support.

Pathways to postsecondary education for youth with refugee backgrounds in Canada

Canada leads the OECD as the country where the first- and second-generation children of immigrants have higher overall postsecondary education (PSE) participation rates than non-immigrants. Yet some groups of immigrant youth, including youth with refugee backgrounds from Africa have been found to achieve lower academic standards, study in lower streams, drop out at higher rates, and enter university in lower proportions. This session will present early research findings from a SSHRC-funded national community-based study exploring how the Canadian school experiences of African refugee youth impact their decision to pursue PSE. The presentation will focus on data collected through 80 interviews with youth in Ontario.

Analyzing International Migration Data: A Comparative Study of Canada and the United States - PART 1

Immigrant Integration in North America – What Can the Data Tell Us?

Several observers contend that successful immigrant integration requires that there be relative parity between immigrants and non-immigrants in several key areas (i.e., economic, social, civic and democratic participation, and health). Evidence informed data is necessary to document disparities for in migrant social and economic outcomes relative to the broader society. In this session, representatives from the U.S. Census Bureau and Statistics Canada will look at good practices in the use of data to measure migrant outcomes by selecting key indicators in the two countries. They will also examine opportunities for comparative work using the censuses in the United States and Canada.

Challenges and Evolutions in Refugee and Migration Policies: A Comparative Exploration of UDHR's Ideals and the Canada-US Safe Third Country Agreement

Then and Now: Are the aspirational fundamental human rights goals of the UDHR undermined by contemporary refugee and migration policies

The UDHR was adopted after the atrocities of WWII. It set out, for the first time, the fundamental human rights to be universally protected. This roundtable will focus on the human rights of displaced people, with a focus on how these populations and the drivers of displacement have changed since the UDHR was adopted and on how contemporary refugee and migration policies often undermine those people most in need of protection.

HIAS and JIAS, both founded over 100 years ago to respond to the urgent needs of Jewish refugees, will reflect on how their mandates have expanded to respond to the global needs of today's displaced people, the impact on their service delivery models, and their engagement with communities and other partners.

- Rachel Levitan, Chief Global Policy and Advocacy Officer, HIAS (Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society), Washington

Control by coordination: The political development of the Canada-US Safe Third Country Agreement

The Canada-US Safe Third Country Agreement was signed in 2002 and subsequently renegotiated in 2023 in order to coordinate asylum policy across the land border connecting the two countries. This presentation explains the political genesis of the Agreement from 1987 to 2002 by focusing on four factors that influenced Canadian actors to pursue the treaty: the limitations of new methods of interdiction by air; concerns over the deflection of asylum seekers from post-Dublin Convention Europe; the institutional development of the new Immigration and Refugee Board; and the pursuit of broader North American policy integration.

North American Index for Measuring Immigrant Integration – A Feasibility Study

As a follow-up to the session Measuring Immigrant Outcomes in the United States and Canada, this workshop will present evidence informed research on indicators of migrant integration in selected cities in Canada and the United States. Researchers from Association of Canadian Studies (ACS) Metropolis Institute and the American Immigration Council (AIC) will showcase some of their current work on individual country indices – the Canadian Index for Measuring Integration and Inclusion (CIMII) and the U.S. Cities Index, respectively. They will also consider the feasibility of establishing a comparative study of selected North American metropolitan areas with a focus on economic integration. The aim of the workshop is to look into ways to create a combined North American Index for Measuring Immigrant Integration for the two countries. The key objective of the index will be to provide a credible framework for ongoing assessment of the state of immigrant integration in Canada and the U.S., which will ultimately be a resource for policymakers, researchers, and immigrant service provider organizations in the two countries.

The Story Book of Resettlement: Newcomer data and insights are summaries of hundreds of thousands of stories of resettlement used to develop client-focused programs to ensure successful integration is achieved

This workshop explores YMCA programming and our clients' feedback as a platform for information sharing to ensure the successful resettlement of newcomers. As we look into our crystal ball, we embed the feedback of newcomers into new policies, and resources to support the integration of future generations. Our hopes to facilitate future resettlement remind us our efforts now can guide us further when we understand feedback is a synonym for improvement. It is our clients' resettlement experiences that are our greatest learnings, and the best vision is insight. L'adaptation des services PRAIDA au fil des changements des politiques d'immigration canadienne et leurs impacts sur le profil de la clientèle desservie

Le PRAIDA, seul programme institutionnel canadien d'accueil et d'intégration des demandeurs d'asile, compte sur plus de 60 ans d'expertise en contexte d'intervention auprès des populations migrantes au Québec. Le programme s'est adapté au fil des vagues migratoires et des changements aux politiques d'immigration canadienne et américaine. Plus récemment, le protocole additionnel à l'ETPS soulève de nouveaux enjeux, notamment en ce qui concerne l'accès au droit d'asile. En effet, l'application du protocole sur l'entièreté de sa frontière canado-américaine a eu un impact sur le profil de la clientèle desservie et la sécurité des passages irréguliers dont le droit est pourtant garanti par l'article 31 de la Convention de 1951.

Closed work permits: First constitutional class action launched in Canada

Migrant workers face a difficult reality asserting their labour and human rights due to their precarious immigration status. As host countries, both Canada and the USA tie migrant workers to their employers, rendering workers highly vulnerable to abuse and exploitation. This panel will examine the history of the Canadian closed work permit regime, highlighting the systemic racism and contemporary discriminatory impact, and the resulting challenges migrant workers face exercising their rights. Migrant Skills Recognition for Full, Equal, and Meaningful Participation in the Labour Market

For migrants seeking a secure and better life in a new country, full, equal, and meaningful participation in the labour market is a critical piece to their successful integration. Migrants often face higher rates of unemployment and underemployment relative to the domestic-born population. Employers often lack the know-how to assess the skills immigrants bring with them and immigrants similarly lack the local knowledge needed to navigate hiring processes. Projects in Canada and the US are showing promise that a shift to skills recognition from using credentials as a benchmark for ability in unregulated jobs can help address chronic underemployment. This conversation will explore the opportunities and challenges presented by this shift and explore the potential to improve settlement outcomes through innovative new practices, including the use of artificial intelligence.

Pandemic arrival: understanding the resettlement of Afghan Refugees in Canada and the United States

In the midst of a coronavirus pandemic, the Taliban swept control over Afghanistan in a few short days during August of 2021. Meanwhile, heightened restrictions and measures preventing travel made it even more difficult for Afghans to flee to safety. Despite these enormous obstacles, some Afghan refugees were resettled in Canada and the United States. Essential arrival and resettlement services were either closed or had to be held online so their reception experiences were “unique” at best, troublesome or nonexistent at worst. This workshop showcases current research and best practices regarding the resettlement of Afghan refugees in the United States and Canada during the pandemic. Experts in refugee resettlement share their best practices and experiences of assisting in the housing, vaccination, language training and other aspects of integration. Researchers share their results of surveys and qualitative interviews. Our goal is to provide an event that allows presenters and audience members to discuss and reflect on the resettlement conditions the Afghans experienced in both countries.

Examining Refugee Rights in the Americas?

"Everyone has the right to seek and to enjoy in other countries asylum from persecution" (article 14 of the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights) . December 10th, 2023 will mark 75 years since the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The terms refugee, asylum seeker and migrant are often used interchangeably. Over the past 75 years there has been considerable change in the way in which migrant receiving societies define refugee status both from the standpoint of applicable categories, the admission process and access to services. With a focus on the Americas, the plenary speakers will examine the legal and other key challenges refugees encounter across the Americas.

Plenary speakers will share their perspectives around the key drivers in national conversations around refugees and refugee status. How does the public understand and interpret refugee issues and how do the issues get situated them in broader societal debate (s) about immigration? To that extent is xenophobia a concern in discussions about refugees? What is the state of cooperation across the Americas in addressing the jurisdictional challenges that policy-makers encounter in their efforts to meet the needs of refugee claimants? What does the future hold for refugee admission and settlement and what might the implications of this be for policy-making?
